About JALGAON CITY

Jalgaon district is situated in the northwestern part of Maharashtra in the subregion of Khandesh. The district is often referred to as the "Banana City" of India due to its significant production of bananas. The region also has a substantial number of irrigation projects and dams, which support its agricultural economy. The district has a rich cultural heritage with various festivals, traditions, and local customs being celebrated with enthusiasm. Jalgaon has several attractions, including the famous Ajanta Caves, which are UNESCO World Heritage Sites. Gandhi Teerth is also one of the biggest tourist attractions in Jalgaon city. It is a research institution and museum based on the life of Mahatma Gandhi. Other places of interest include Patnadevi, Omkareshwar Temple, and Mehrun Lake. Jalgaon is home to North Maharashtra University, which offers a variety of undergraduate, postgraduate, and doctoral programs. The district also has numerous schools and colleges, contributing to the region's educational development. Jalgaon is well-connected by road, rail & air. The Bhusawal Junction railway station is a major railhead in the region, connecting it to various parts of the country. Jalgaon city also has flights to Goa and Pune along with Mumbai, Hyderabad, Ahmedabad, Kolhapur, Nashik and Nanded.
