The Community Health Nursing Department of Godavari College of Nursing organized an insightful alumni talk on the topic “Preventive Pathway: Building Healthier Lives Through Community Participation” on 6th December 2025. The session was conducted online from 10:00 AM to 11:00 AM and witnessed active participation from students and faculty members.

Objective

To enhance awareness among students about the importance of preventive healthcare in improving community health outcomes.

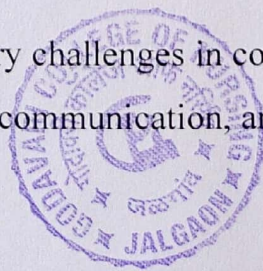

To understand the role of community participation in promoting healthy behaviors and preventing diseases.

To provide insights into practical strategies for implementing preventive health programs at the community level.

The session was delivered by Ms. Leena Shingre, an esteemed alumna of the college and currently Associate Professor at Shri Sambhaji College of Nursing, Nanded. She shared her rich professional experiences and emphasized the vital role of community involvement in promoting preventive health practices.

Ms. Shingre highlighted the significance of early detection, health education, and behavioral change as key components of preventive care. She explained how empowering communities through awareness programs, participation in local health initiatives, and collaboration with healthcare workers can significantly reduce the burden of diseases. Practical examples from her fieldwork provided students with clarity on implementing prevention-focused strategies in real community settings.

The talk also covered contemporary challenges in community health, the importance of culturally sensitive communication, and the need for nurses to act as change agents within communities. Students were encouraged to adopt a proactive approach in community engagement and utilize available resources effectively.

The session concluded with an interactive question-answer segment where participants discussed various issues related to preventive health and community participation.

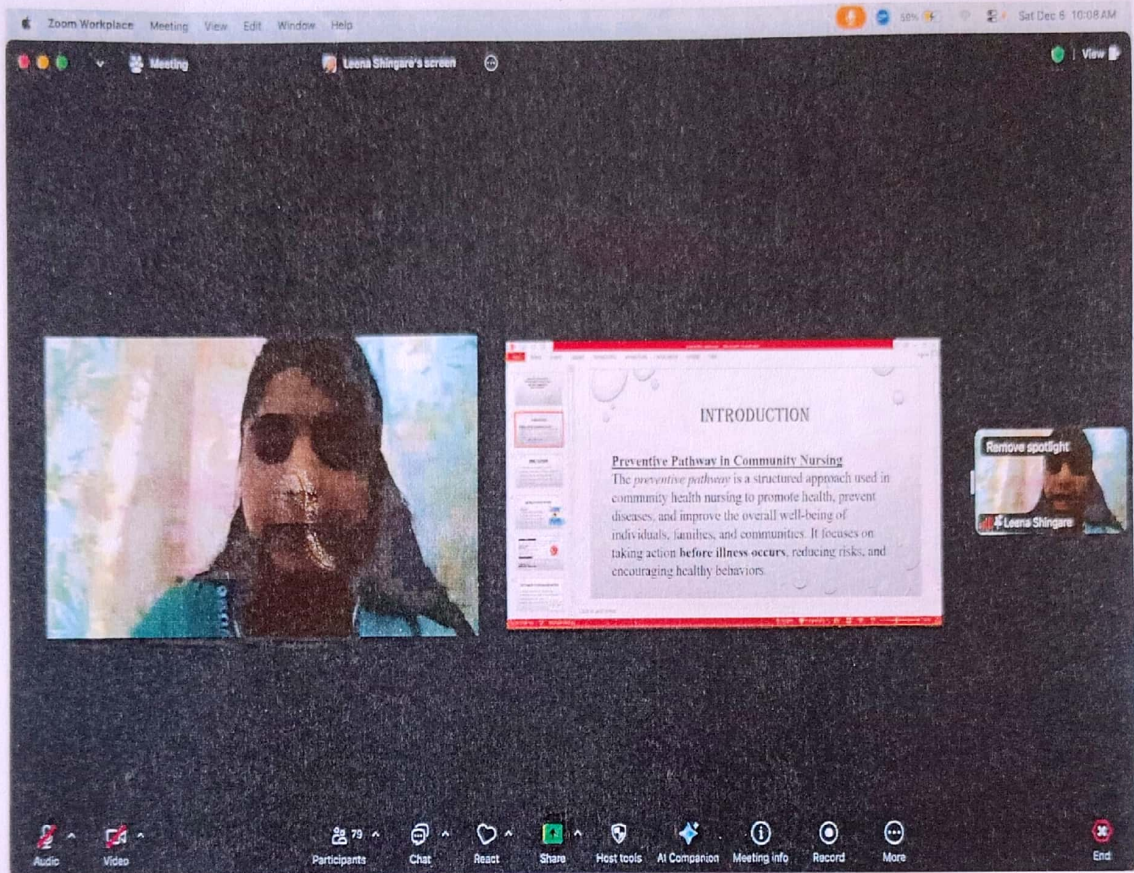

Ms. Swati Gadegone, the convenor of the program, expressed gratitude to the speaker for her valuable insights and appreciated the enthusiastic participation of students.

Overall, the alumni talk proved to be highly informative and motivating. It strengthened students' understanding of preventive healthcare and reinforced the importance of community participation in building healthier societies.
